

Joe's Garage is a lush three-piece combo of guitar, bass, and drums. The band actually did, much like the infamous subject of Frank Zappa's rock opera titled, "Joe's Garage", start in Joe's garage. Joe, a local cement contractor, is a great friend of the band and was instrumental in the formation of the band in 2016. He graciously let the band rehearse in his garage for a few months during the initial formation and for a year thereafter.

As previously mentioned, on September 17, 1979, Frank Zappa released Act 1 of his three-part rock opera titled, "Joe's Garage". Zappa described the album as a "stupid little story about how the government is going to do away with music." As it turns out, all these years later the band discovered that they enjoyed listening to the album in their teens even though they had all come of age in different areas of the US. Therefore in light of their admiration of Zappa's album and appreciation of Joe's friendship, it seemed appropriate to name the band Joe's Garage.

Musicians:

Eric - guitar, vocals

Mark T. - bass, backup vocals

Steve (Sticky) - drums, vocals